

Your Red Packet 2021

Children in South Sudan and Somalia have long been suffering from hunger caused by conflicts and economic crises. The unseasonal downpours have further triggered crop failures and locust swarms that ravage the remaining crops. Worse still, the pandemic that hits the countries at this time only exacerbates the situation, hindering both farming activities and the fight against the locust upsurge. Many children have become malnourished, struggling with the threat of death.

Please join us in helping them! Encourage your students to donate their red packets to help improve the nutrition of children in South Sudan and Somalia. You will be able to support them with fresh food e-vouchers and help set up community-based nutrition programmes to educate people on nutrition.
